CATALINA'S HOME
AGAIN RAIDED BY SHERIFF SATURDAYOld Offender is Now Inmate of Lee Co.
Jail for Time

BULLETIN.

Frank Catalina furnished bonds in sum of $1,500 this morning and was released from custody. He will appear for preliminary hearing before Justice Grover W. Gehant Friday.

Thomas Tyler was taken before Judge William L. Leach in the county court this morning on an information charging transportation and possession of intoxicating liquor. He was fined $100 and costs on one of the counts and on the second sentenced to serve 60 days in the county jail. Tyler was arrested Saturday night at the time when the Frank Catalina home was raided.

The residence of Frank Catalina on Noble avenue, commonly known as "Bootlegger's Knob," was the scene of a surprise raid by a large force of officers composed of police officers and deputy sheriffs Saturday night about 9:30. The Catalina home, which has been the scene of numerous liquor raids and against which an injunction has been issued out of the circuit court, was the objective of the raiding party. Catalina was taken in custody. It is said while he was in the net of serving two deputies with drinks on the back porch, pouring the liquor from an aluminum tea pot. He was taken to the county jail where he is being held.

Six men who were in the house were also arrested, and taken to jail. This morning when arraigned before Justice J. O. Shaulis, five of the number being charged with possession of intoxicating liquor was fined.

Early Sunday morning Sheriff Sherd Dodson and Deputy George Banning of Oregon headed a raiding party and entered the property recently purchased by Catalina in Grand Detour. Reports from Oregon this morning were to the effect that the officers found ample evidence of presence of liquor in generous quantities on the premises. This is the first raid that has been conducted by Ogle county authorities in the village of Grand Detour.

FAMILY NEARLY WIPE OUT WHEN
LAUNCH CAPSIZEDMississippi Tragedy Sunday Took Lives of Five People

Missouri, Iowa, May 4.—Search was being continued in the Mississippi river near Fairport, six miles north of here, today for the bodies of Gus Dusenberry and his three children who were drowned Sunday morning when a huge wave capsized a launch in which nine people were riding.

The body of Mrs. Dusenberry, also a victim of the accident, was the only one of the five recovered.

The family was almost wiped out by the tragedy. The only surviving members being Floyd, a son who was not with the picnic party in the launch, and Fern and Mable, daughters, who were rescued by Art Snyder and Howard Hartzfeldt, the latter a government engineer stationed at Rock Island, Ill.

Boat Upset Twice.

According to the survivor's story early this morning the boat was swamped by two waves. The first upset it and the men in the party had succeeded in getting the women and children back into the boat when a second wave overturned the launch, sweeping its victims down stream. Hartzfeldt and Snyder grabbed the two girls and put them back into the boat, hanging on to the sides to prevent it being overturned again. Henry Snyder and Glen Brewer, river men, in the meantime had put out from shore in a launch. They rescued the four young people and recovered Mrs. Dusenberry's body. The bodies of Clifford, aged 6, Charles 12, Iona, 3, and of the father, were not seen after that.

Dr. A. J. Oliver of Muscatine was called and went to Fairport, taking a pulmotor with him. However, Mrs. Dusenberry was already dead, the shock having been too great for her system to withstand, the doctor said.

Gus Dusenberry had been a mail carrier for the past fourteen years.

DIXONITES HELP CARRY INJURED
WOMAN FROM PITFell Into Canyon Near Ottawa While Picking Flowers

L. L. Edson and J. H. Howell of this city assisted in carrying the bruised and broken body of Miss Gertrude Stringborn of LaSalle from Wildcat Canyon near Ottawa late Sunday afternoon. The details of Miss Stringborn's accident are told in the following Associated Press dispatch to the Telegraph:

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Ottawa, Ill., May 4.—Miss Gertrude Stringborn, 40 years old, of LaSalle, Ill., while picking flowers in Wildcat Canyon at Starved Rock, Ill., yesterday plunged 75 feet to the rocks below and was fatally injured. She and a brother and other members of their family had spent the day at the state park and after they had started to motor home stopped to pick some wild flowers. Miss Stringborn reached the height above the canyon and was seen to totter as though dizzy. She fell ten feet, rolled over and over and then plunged off the precipice.

The injured woman was taken unconscious from the canyon and taken to the People's hospital in Peru where it was found she was suffering from internal injuries, a severe scalp wound, a fracture of the collar bone, a fracture of the left arm and other unnumbered injuries.

NO PROGRESS IN

ST. LOUIS DOCTORBody Found With Bullet Wound in His Head and Knee

By Associated Press Leased Wire
St. Louis, May 4.—Continuing investigation today of the killing of Dr. W. A. Dillon, whose body with bullet wounds in the head and left knee was found on Washington university's athletic field Friday, Lieut. Aylward of the detective department said "we have covered the ground thoroughly only to find ourselves at the starting point."

The theory that a well known University City business man and his wife would be about to throw light on the case has been discarded. Lieut. Aylward added.

Miss Lynn, hotel telephone operator, who told of threats by an unidentified man to Dr. Dillon during a telephone conversation between Dr. Dillon who lived at the hotel and the stranger was discounted. Three brothers of the slain surgeon were expected here for the funeral today, and police expressed the hope they might furnish new leads toward solving the mystery. They are Paul Dillon, insurance broker, Boston; State Senator John Dillon, Chicago; and Judge Daniel Dillon, Sr., a former member of the circuit bench of Washington, D. C.

All Boys Invited to Join Lee Co. Pig Club

There is a great deal of interest evidenced in the organizing of the Pig club in Dixon. All boys who would like to, are invited to join, whether they are attending school or not. The club is not yet formed and all interested are invited to attend the meeting Tuesday evening at 7:30 at the south side high school building. Boys in the seventh and eighth grades and all other boys not in school are cordially invited to attend. Prof. Weiss is in charge of the organization.

SURVEY OF DIXON AND COMMUNITY IS MOVING FAVORABLYInvestigators Pleased With Reception They are Receiving

The Dixon community survey has been under way for a week and the investigators look forward to a rapid completion of the survey, in view of the splendid cooperation of the people of the city and community, and the widespread interest in the project.

As has been explained in previous issues of The Telegraph, the survey is an investigation of trading done by people of this community in order to ascertain the things people like about Dixon as a place in which to trade and also the things which restrict their trading here.

Those interviewed are also asked for their opinions on the phases of community life, such as the streets, schools, transportation, factories and amusements in order that an examination may be made of the entire social, civic and economic life of the community. The purpose of the survey is to discover how Dixon can be made a better place in which to trade, and also a better place in which to live.

Cordially Received.

The investigators have been cordially received by most of those upon which they have called, and they have received much intelligent and constructive criticism. They have found the residents, as a whole, taking a very broad-minded viewpoint, looking upon the interviews as an unusual opportunity to express their opinions, together with their criticism and their ideas as to what could be done and should be done to improve, not only the stores in town, but the whole community as well.

The investigators are anticipating many more productive interviews in the city this week. They feel that the city folks come in close contact with the stores here and are also conversant with local conditions in general, and that as a result they should have much to say.

No names or addresses are taken by the questioners, and all opinions have equal weight. This makes a very unusual opportunity for anyone to get one's voice heard in community affairs.

Everyone, by taking a public-spirited attitude in adding one frank criticism or suggestion to those which have already been expressed, will be doing a part in helping the home community.

Dixonites, therefore, are urged to be ready for the survey men when they call and to bear in mind that there is but one reason for the work, and that is to help Dixon.

Mrs. Elias Jones Died
at Son's Home, Sterling

Mrs. Elias Jones passed away at 12:30 last night at the home of her son, Willard Jones in Sterling, where she made her home for the past several weeks. Mrs. Jones, who had been a resident of Dixon and vicinity for almost 60 years, was born in Taylor township, Ogle county and was 59 years, eleven months and ten days of age. She had been an invalid and confined to her home for the past 14 years.

She leaves to mourn her passing her husband, Elias Jones; two daughters, Mrs. Walter Thurm and Miss Ida Jones; three sons, Louis and Robert of Dixon and Willard of Sterling; Mrs. Jones, who had been a resident of Dixon and vicinity for almost 60 years, was born in Taylor township, Ogle county and was 59 years, eleven months and ten days of age. She had been an invalid and confined to her home for the past 14 years.

Attorney James Kelley
to be Memorial Speaker

Amboy, May 4.—The committee in charge of the observance of Memorial Day in this city, announced this morning the securing of Attorney James R. Kelley of Savannah, who will deliver the address of the day. The speaker is well known in Amboy having practiced law here for several years and was also one of the ex-service men to go from this city. Plans are being completed for one of the best programs in the history of Amboy.

OUT OUR WAY

DIXON ATHLETES' IMPROVEMENT WAS SHOWN SATURDAYBoys Did Much Better in Contest Held by
Freeport School

With a week of hard practice behind them D. H. S. athletes made a much better showing in the Freeport Invitational meet at Freeport Saturday. While they gained but three points, one more than at Mr. Morris, they showed a world of improvement in every branch. McReynolds, who got a late start this season, gives promise of becoming a fast hurdler, and although he failed to get in the finals he looked good enough to be formidable in the conference meet here May 23. Prescott, who was also late in reporting for practice this season, was unable to run in the high hurdles because he had not been entered in this event. Had the officials permitted him to run it is probable that he would have gained a place in that event. Winebrenner, who placed third in both the quarter and the half mile at Mr. Morris, took second in the quarter but was unable to finish in the half mile. This is the second meet in which he has been the only point getter for Dixon. Other men who did well but who failed to reach the point column were: Capt. Johnson and Groth who are steadily improving in the weights, Beede and O'Malley who ran the dashes, Keller in the hurdles, and Poffenberger and Rogers in the mile. The relay team won third in a field of eight teams including Rockford, Freeport, Lanark and Rockville. Although they were forced to run on the outside lane they lost to Freeport and Lanark who won first and second respectively, by a very small margin. The relay team consists of Winebrenner, McReynolds, Beede and Raymond.

Ex-Senator Gardner
of Mendota is Dead

Mendota—Former State Senator C. P. Gardner died at 9 o'clock Sunday morning at his home here. The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Gardner was a senator for three terms. He served as chairman of the committee on senatorial apportionment and chairman of the appropriations committee.

Bank Makes Record in Moving its Equipment

The City National Bank opened in its temporary quarters this morning at 9 o'clock. The removal of a large amount of the bank equipment took place over the week end starting with the close of the banking hours Saturday afternoon. No delay was experienced in the transfer from the old site to the temporary location in the Downing building.

THIRTY GANGS
ROAD WORKERS
ON STATE WORKReports Show Illinois
Road Program Going Forward Swiftly

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Springfield—Gangs of workmen in a hundred different places throughout the state are this week putting forward Illinois' hard road program.

Thirty of these gangs are gathered about big concrete mixers, which are turning out the hard surface which tops Illinois' bond issue highway. Beside them there are several other gangs in the state busy at building bond issue bridges and grading the road bed preparatory to the later work of hard surfacing.

Usually warm weather recently brought gangs out on nearly all the jobs that are under contract, according to the state highway department. Labor at this rate will continue throughout the workable weather of the year, and when next winter's frost forces a recess, the department expects another record of road building.

The thirty gangs which are at work completing hard roads are widely scattered. According to the department's report they are found in the following places:

Route 2 in Ogle county; two gangs on Route 2 in Lee county; Route 3 in Whiteside; Route 27 in Carroll; Route 2 in La Salle; Route 1 in Iroquois; Route 17 in Grundy; Route 3 in Mercer; Route 7 in Bureau; Route 9 in Fulton; Route 24 in Taxewell; Route 21 in Knox; Route 19 in Vermilion; Route 16 in Shelby; Route 36 in Adams; Route 1 in White; Route 15 in Wayne; Route 25 in Clay; Route 23 in Crawford; Route 3 in Green; Route 13 in Randolph; Route 16 in Montgomery; County road in St. Clair; Route 1 in Johnson and Route 14 in Franklin.

GIRL FRIEND SAYS BODY IS THAT OF
MRS. J. DESIDERIOWas With Her the Day
Before She Met Her
Death in Dunes

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Gary, Ind., May 4.—The mystery surrounding the death of a young woman, whose partly burned body was found a week ago in the Indiana dunes near Chesterton, appeared to be disappearing today with the positive identification of the torso by a girl friend.

Florence Kish Roto said the body was that of Mrs. Josephine Desiderio, 21, of Gary. This corroborated the recognition made by Mrs. Desiderio's mother. Miss Roto said she had been with Mrs. Desiderio the day before the murder. Miss Roto was arrested yesterday at South Bend and was said by the police to have been preparing to flee to Detroit.

Miss Roto said that she and Mrs. Desiderio took a train from Gary to Chesterton with two mile companions the day before the crime. She was held for further questioning today.

One of the strongest points in her identification was her pointing out a bit of cloth found near the mutilated body on the Indiana Highway as part of a petticoat she lent Mrs. Desiderio before the trip to Chesterton.

Mrs. Artie L. Hossler, of Michigan City, however, was as equally positive as others have been in identifying the body last night as that of her daughter Mrs. Mary Berg, 22, wife of Harold Berg, a railroad brakeman. Mrs. Hattie Berg was accused by Mrs. Hossler as possibly knowing something of her daughter's disappearance, but Mrs. Berg said the girl is in Danville, Ill.

So well satisfied that the identification is final, despite two other partial identifications are the Gary officers that Capt. Lynn of the Detective department said the murderer was known and soon would be in custody. It is known, however, that Mrs. Desiderio was a mother, and the autopsy performed on the torn and burned body by Dr. Dobbins of Valparaiso, Porter county coroner, and Dr. H. A. Seidel, his assistant, was stated officially to have disclosed that the murdered girl never had been a mother.

Corrections to Soldier
Dead Register Requested

At the meeting of the Dixon Memorial Association held Saturday evening preliminary plans for the coming celebration of Memorial Day were made and D. E. Heimick, reappointed as Historian, was asked to enlist the aid of the public in correcting and bringing the register of deaths up to date not later than May 15, at which time it is hoped to have the yearly register and program printed.

DIXON EMPLOYEE
OF I. N. U. WINS
TRIP TO 'FRISCOEssay Wins Wide Competition for Miss Edna Decker.

Miss Edna J. Decker, chairman of the I. N. U. Women's Publicity information committee and also in charge of the stock sales department in the head offices in this city, has been awarded a trip to San Francisco, Calif., in June as the result of a paper submitted in a contest conducted by the Middle West Utilities company. Vice President E. D. Alexander received a telegram this morning stating that Miss Decker's paper had been selected from a competition of about 60 papers from all parts of the country, as the prize winner. The message also congratulated the Dixon young lady on her success, and she is likewise receiving congratulations from her associate employees and many friends today.

The contest was opened Feb. 16 and closed April 4 to the women employees of the subsidiaries of the Middle West Utilities company, and was nationwide in its scope, as an educational campaign. The subject to be written was "Utilities in General" and the paper was to be in the form of an address delivered before a Woman's club. Three papers were selected by the judges of the Illinois Northern Utilities company and these were forwarded to the national board of judges at Chicago.

The first prize offered the competitors was a trip to the National Electric Light association convention to be held in San Francisco, Calif., opening June 16. Other prizes were also offered by the local utilities company. Miss Helen Winger of the sales department of the local I. N. U. offices has been awarded the first prize offered by Vice President and General Manager E. D. Alexander, which will afford her a trip to French Lick Springs in August, with all expenses paid.

Officers of the Illinois Northern Utilities company are proud of the fact that for two years running, women employees have captured the much coveted first prize. Last year a paper prepared by Miss Vandenberg of the Morrison branch won the coveted prize for an I. N. U. woman employee. A contest which will close this week will doubtless result in the sending of one of the male employees to the California city for the convention in June.

GROVER SCOTT, WELL KNOWN IN
DIXON, IS DEADPassed Away Sunday
at Home of Mother-in-law, Suddenly.

Grover C. Scott, known to a wide circle of acquaintances as "Scotty," who for several years has been employed as chauffeur by Dr. E. A. Sick, passed away very suddenly Sunday evening about 6 o'clock at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Catherine Putnam, 422 West Seventh St. He and his family were spending the day with Mrs. Putnam and about 6 o'clock, he was talking with neighbors, when he was seized suddenly and passed away.

"Scotty" had been in failing health for some time suffering from heart trouble, and his sudden loss will be keenly felt by the host of friends, who admired him for his genial personality and cheerful disposition. Realizing that he was suffering from a severe heart affliction, he maintained his activity and cheerful manner to the end.

Grover C. Scott was born in Petersburg, Va., April 1, 1886, and came to Dixon about 14 years ago. He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Miss Wilhelmina of this city and one brother and one sister residing in Virginia. During the past ten years he had been in the employ of Dr. Sickles. Funeral services will be conducted from the home of Mrs. Catherine Putnam, 422 West Seventh street tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Prentiss Hovey Cass officiating and with interment in Oakwood.

KINDLY NOTE OF WARNING
GIVEN TODAYAmbassador to London
Gives All Europe
"An Earful"

By Associated Press Leased Wire

London, May 4.—The new American Ambassador Alonzo B. Houghton, speaking tonight before a distinguished audience here, which included the Prime Minister of Great Britain, declared in friendly but firm terms that unless peace based on good will were re-established in Europe, he feared American assistance for the reconstruction of Europe must cease. The ambassador made it clear in the course of his address that money aid, not only to moral, but monetary aid, coming, as it did, from the former American Ambassador to Germany, following his recent visit to the United States and conferences with President Coolidge, the pronouncement was calculated to create a profound impression on the statesmen and diplomats gathered to hear the new ambassador and perhaps he regarded as among the most important delivered by America's envoys to the court of St. James in years.

Is Given Importance and the authoritative note which it sounded, it was assumed by those trained in diplomacy that he must undoubtedly be voicing the views of the administration at Washington.

Special significance was attached to the fact that the statement comes at a time when considerable suspicion and distrust of Germany are being voiced in various parts of Europe, particularly in France, because of the election to the presidency of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, who is as resented by some to represent those reactionary forces which are inimical to the peace and interest of at least some of the allies.

Interlocked with this idea, it has been commented, may be the fate of the security pact, proposed by Germany and warmly seconded by England, as a great step towards the re-establishment of real peace. Indeed, there has been some speculation as to whether the effective working of the Dawes Plan might be impaired by this fanning of the smoldering fire of distrust.

Up To All Europeans.

Whether Ambassador Houghton had any of these things in mind was open to conjecture. He referred to none of them, but contented himself the re-establishment of peace was essential to the continuance of assistance from the United States, but the answer to the question whether there was to be peace must come from the people of Europe themselves. If there was to be peace then America would help in the reconstruction to the extent of her ability.

"The full measure of American helpfulness," Ambassador Houghton declared, "can be obtained only when the American people are assured that the time for destructive methods and policies has passed and that the time for peaceful upbuilding has come."

As the guest of honor of the Pillgrims, Mr. Houghton was making his maiden address in the capacity of ambassador to Great Britain. Among the most prominent gathered to welcome him, in addition to Premier Baldwin to introduce him, were the Duke of York, former Premier MacDonald, the ambassadors from Belgium, Japan, Germany, Portugal and Brazil, Sir Auckland Geddes, the Earl of Craven and Lord Astor.

New Grand Jury to Take Up Teapot Dome Oil Case

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, May 4.—With a summoning of a panel for the selection of a special grand jury here today, Alice Fomereque and Owen J. Roberts, special government counsel in the oil cases, were expected to arrive during the day to prepare for later appearance before the jury in reopening alleged criminal phases of the leasing of the naval oil reserves.

The government counsel already have appealed from the decision a month ago dismissing the criminal indictments returned last June against Albert B. Fall, former interior secretary, and Harry F. Sinclair, E. I. Do lony and his son Edward, Jr.

The indictments were dismissed because of the presence in the grand jury room of an assistant to the attorney general.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH NOTES.

Meetings Tuesday: In the afternoon, at Mrs. W. C. Stauffer's, 215 Lincoln Way, the Woman's Missionary Society, Mrs. W. B. Hall, director of the program. At night, with Misses Lilly and Golda, the Young Ladies Mission Circle, Miss Bernice DeFrais, leader. The Board of Church Officers, J. W. Johnson, chairman, will also meet at night, at the church.

"Training for Service," the famous teacher-training text-book, by Herbert Montger, over a half-million copies of which have been sold, will be used by the new teacher-training class, which will recite immediately following prayer meeting, the minister in charge.

Thursday there will be an all-day meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society at the church, with the usual family dinner, served by Section One.

The afternoon rally at the Grand Detour church yesterday was very largely attended, and Pastor Payne's speech on Americanism gave the audience considerable to think about, when it comes to one's duty to the country and to the church. The work at Grand Detour, Pine Creek, and Coleta is showing marked progress since Brother Payne took charge. The Polo church has just located Brother Morris' successor, George W. Kelly of Iowa, who preached the first time as regular pastor yesterday.

ON HIS BUSINESS.
When I consider how my life is spent
Half my days, in this dark world and wide,
And that one talent which is death to hide
Lodged in me useless, though my soul more bent
To serve my Maker, and present
My true account, lest He returning chide,
Doth God, exact day-labour, light denied?
I fondly ask: But Patience, to prevent
That murmur, soon replies: God doth not need
Either man's work, or His own gifts;
Who best
Bear His mild yoke, they serve Him best: His state
Is kindly, thousands at his bidding speed
And post o'er land and ocean without rest:
They also serve who only stand and wait.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS.
Revives Faded Colors.
A splash of vinegar to each quart of finishing water will often revive faded colors that have faded through the use of strong soaps.

Sandpaper Needle.

Menus for a Family

Tested by C. SISTER MARY.
Breakfast:
Stewed prunes, cereal with thin cream; fish maki, bran muffins, marmalade, milk, coffee.

Luncheon:
Eggs en coquille, vegetable timbales, brown bread, stewed rhubarb, milk, tea.

Dinner:
Fricassee of lamb, new potatoes in cream sauce, dandelion green, asparagus salad, cottage pudding with strawberry sauce, graham bread, milk, coffee.

When serving new potatoes to a family of "assorted sizes" keep in mind that new potatoes are like unripe fruit and much less digestible than ripe or mature potatoes. If the potatoes are too new, rice should be provided for children under 10 years of age.

Eggs en Coquille.
Four eggs, 4 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 2 cups milk, 1 egg yolk, 2 tablespoons grated cheese, four crustards.

Cut slices of bread about two inches thick. Cut out rounds with a large biscuit cutter. With a smaller cutter cut half through each round in the center. Cut out this center, making a "crustade." Dip each in melted butter and color in a hot oven. Arrange on a fireproof platter and drop an egg in each cavity, being careful not to break the yolk. Place in a moderately hot oven until the eggs are set. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and cook five minutes. Add cheese and cook over hot water until cheese is melted. Remove from the heat and stir in unseasoned egg yolk. Pour this sauce over and around the eggs. Garnish with sprigs of parsley if convenient and serve.

While this recipe has a rather "high falutin'" name, it's really very simple, and a delicious change from plain toast and eggs.

Has Position as Dean of Women
Mrs. Alice Ruth Day, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Ruth, of Prairieville, has accepted a position as dean of women and instructor in the Sillman Institute at Demaguette, P. I., and expects to sail in company with Dr. and Mrs. D. S. Hibbard, president of the institute, on the President Pierce June 13, from San Francisco. This is the same boat on which Mrs. Day's sister and husband sailed about two years ago.

Mrs. Day has passed the examinations satisfactorily and is being sent out as a missionary by the Presbyterian mission board. She will finish her school year at Ashton, Ill., on June 5th. Dr. and Mrs. Hibbard have made the trip here several times during their twenty some years of missionary work in the P. I. Mrs. Day expects to spend the first couple weeks with her sister, Rev. and Mrs. F. H. Dawson, now stationed at Aacloban, P. I., which is about two hundred miles from Demaguette. Mrs. Day is a graduate of Carthage college, and has taught in Grandview and Keota, Ia., high schools. Last year she was at home with her parents, being principal and instructor of the Ashton high school. Her many friends will regret her leaving, yet wish her much success in her new field of work, not only in her school work but also in the religious work.

Observing Mother's Day Beautiful Custom
Sunday, May 10, is this year designated as Mother's Day. This will be the 12th year of official observation, the second Sunday in May having been set aside as Mother's Day by an act of Congress signed in 1915 by Woodrow Wilson. In its provision was made for display of flags on public buildings, as well as the expression of individual tribute to motherhood.

That the idea was a welcome one has been proved by the rapid growth of ceremonies in connection with the day. Church services on Mother's Day are now almost universally arranged with the day in mind, and other customs of the day are springing up. A white carnation is the accepted flower to be worn in memory of one's mother, and the sending to mothers of specially designed greeting cards noting the day is another simple method of expressing appreciation which has met with approval.

The actual origin of the movement which led to setting aside Mother's Day is not generally known, hence seems worthy of attention in view of the increasing observation of it. Investigation shows that Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia in 1908 made the first step toward Mother's Day when she asked that the church in the little Virginia town where her mother had been a leading spirit, hold a service in her memory. A little later the Philadelphia churches are found to have generally observing on Sunday in May as Mother's Day, and the plan grew to culmination in National legislation.

Various English customs act as a precedent for the idea of Mother's Day. In the days when young men and girls were bound out as apprentices or maids, the fourth Sunday in Lent was set aside as a day when they might return to their parents. Still earlier, the idea is found in Rome when on the same fourth Sunday, gifts were annually brought to the Mother church. Even the pagans had their idealization of motherhood, expressed in the worship of a super-goddess known as Rhea, the great mother of the gods.

ENTERTAINED THOSE IN Cast of Play
On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. William Kranov of Harmon entertained the members of the cast of the play, "Her Gloves," and their families, numbering about twenty-five in all. The play was given for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church and the proceeds were fifty-five dollars from the two productions of the piece at Harmon on March 13th and 14th, and they reaped something like twenty dollars from the production of the play in Sterling, sometime in April. "Her Gloves" was a most charming play and received commendation from all who saw it.

On Friday evening music was a feature of the gathering and a knock on the door drew attention to a large basket on the threshold holding many smaller baskets, with letters cut to form the names of each one who took part in the play. The baskets were cleverly made by the children, taught by Mrs. Kranov, the tissue paper fringed and were tied with ribbons and filled with candies, etc. These were kept as favors. A dainty luncheon of ices and cakes were served and the entire evening proved one of great enjoyment, to all present.

Those who took part in the play were Mr. and Mrs. William Kranov, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Seago, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Kugler, Miss Ethel Dietz, Miss Lydia Mussmann, Dan Watkins and Raymond Edson.

"Dice Dress" From Paris

Son of Former Dixon Man Marries

Friends here have received word of the marriage of a former Dixon boy who made good in the west, Lyman Gage, son of former Alderman A. I. Gage of this city, who was married recently to Miss Greta Fraser of Los Angeles, Calif. Mr. Gage, who spent his boyhood in this city, is now connected with the circulation department of the Los Angeles Examiner, with which he started as a carrier. His bride is the daughter of the president of the Hillman Bank of Los Angeles, and the newweds are making their home in Hollywood.

Paris just dotes on designing unique frocks such as this one. It is of black chiffon in smart straight lines and the unique feature is a cluster of regular dice at the end of a long ribbon neck lace.

REPUBLICAN UNITY.

In contrast to the drum-beating demonstrations which are the striking features of political organizations, the low-speaking and effective functioning of the Republican organization under Chairman Butler, marks a happy and satisfactory departure. It can be said without fear of contradiction that the Republican National Committee has an operating efficiency record today which is quite extraordinary. While Chairman Butler has trimmed the expenditures to a modest figure on the theory that the people who contribute to campaigns are entitled to a careful expenditure of the money which they give, the lines of connection throughout the country and into the Republican centers have been materially strengthened.

Chairman Butler unconsciously has the habit of really surprising the newspapers by the length of his vision. Because they had failed to note the burning of red fire, a group of New York newspapermen recently called on him to discuss the campaign in '26, and in five minutes he spread before them his program for not only holding all that the Republicans now have, but making gains, a program so complete in its way that they express their admiration for it in the newspaper stories which they wrote.

An important fact, well worth noting, is the complete association of thought between the President and the Chairman. While the President is president of all the people of the United States, he is also titular head of the Republican party, and it is a matter of congratulation to the Republican party that in this case the Chairman and the President have this complete unity of thought. This was made evident the other day when the President, during a newspaper conference, voluntarily spoke in a most complimentary manner of the work which the Chairman was doing and of the confidence which he had in him.—Rockford Register-Gazette.

HERE'S A DRY LAW THAT'S DRY.

Indiana henceforth is no place for a person of bibulous tendencies of even one who takes a little snifter only at rare intervals. The Wright dry law has gone into effect in that state, a law that is dryer than the dust of a country road in mid-summer.

For purchasing or receiving intoxicating liquor, for possession of it, or manufacturing it, selling or giving it away, or for carrying it on the person the penalty is thirty days to six months and a fine of from $100 to $500. For possessing a still or using one, one to five years and a maximum fine of $1,000, and for transporting liquor by vehicle one to two years imprisonment and a maximum fine of $1,000.

The smell of liquor and the testimony of the officers that they smelled liquor are prima facie evidence of the operation of a blind tiger.

Indiana certainly has gone and got itself a dry law.

COLORADO, THE PROGRESSIVE.

Colorado celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its admission to the Union by repealing its primary law and returning to the convention system for nomination of its state officers.

Not long ago Colorado was pointed out as a progressive state, where they had cross-word ballots, the initiative, the referendum, the recall, and all of the new-fangled forms that were being promoted in that day.

It learned that not all change is progress. It had elections galore, and all of the expenses incident thereto. It initiated, it referred, it recalled. It was great for those who liked action, and reaction. Yet, under its kind of government it was the only state in the Union where United States troops were sent twice in ten years.

On every side is evidence that the direct primary did not do what was promised for it. Long ago men who sponsored is began advocating its repeal in various states. The direct primary for nomination of state officers is inferior to the convention. In this state the democrats ignore it and nominate by convention in fact, by the primary only technically. Republicans spend hundreds of thousands of dollars in campaigns, aside from the cost of carrying out the elections.

HUMBUG.

Now comes the Department of Agriculture with the solemn declaration that the term "busy bee" is misleading.

It seems that the honey bee is a fraudulent lady. She is not busy, say the experts who have just finished an extensive investigation; she merely looks busy.

The honey bee, declare the department's scientists, spends more time in the hive than she does outside. She makes only about 32 trips in her lifetime and gathers less than a gram of nectar.

Thus is exploded another one of our popular delusions. But one has to hand it to the honey bee. Think how long she has been "putting it over" on the public!

GERMANY.

Only 20 per cent of the eligible failed to vote at the last German election.

It's a civically healthy American community that votes better than 60 per cent.

So don't worry too much about the return of the monarchy to Germany. Fear more a minority rule in America.

The worst thing about the country in the springtime is the way the birds wake up city visitors so early in the morning

CAMPAIGN MACHINERY WILL BE A REALITY

Enter the "talkies," with President Coolidge as the first star performer. At a dinner to the newspaper publishers in New York, the president appeared, visibly and audibly, in a speech delivered in Washington the week before.

The diners heard the speech, and saw the speaker delivering it. The same film could be shown all over the country, everywhere at once.

How soon the "talkies" will be the usual dramatic entertainment we must wait to see. But that they will be the chief speechmakers of the next campaign is already certain. Speakers "on behalf of" candidates will be nearly superfluous.

The candidates themselves will appear everywhere. Campaigning by machinery will be a reality.

Aaron Sapiro, attorney and organizer of farm co-operatives, sued Henry Ford for a million, on account of articles in the "Dearborn Independent" charging him with being one of a conspiracy of Jewish bankers, who seek to control the food markets of the world.

Sapiro may or may not get his million. Fortunately, he would not be impoverished by the lack of it, nor Ford by the loss of it. But he will remind us once more that the fact that a man is great in one thing may not prevent him from being small in another.

Ford, the most successful manufacturer and most popular employer in America, is also one of its most bigoted, stupid and ignorant newspaper publishers, when he touches on this, his one obsession.

The inconsistencies of human nature are strange, but not so strange as the inconsistencies of public sentiment in dealing with them. What other man could have made the journalistic blunders of Ford and still retained his reputation in everything else?

FREEDOM ENDS WHEN IT INFRINGES ON RIGHTS OF OTHERS

King Alfonso of Spain grows freer on American "freedom." Spain is a dictatorship. Nobody has any legal right. But you can stand in the middle of the road without a policeman telling you to move on, drink what and when you like, and "sing your head off" all night. There is no such "freedom" in New York or London.

Naturally not. But the reasons are not all governmental. If you stand in the middle of a New York or London street, the automobiles will bump you off unless the police man moves you on. And if you may not sing and carouse all night, neither can your neighbors keep you awake by doing so when you want to sleep.

If "freedom" consisted only in the right to do as you pleased, the only place to exercise it would be in the middle of an uninhabited desert. As soon as there are two people, the liberty of one ends just where it infringes on the like liberty of the other.

"RAIN-MAKER" JUST ANOTHER OF OUR POPULAR ILLUSIONS

Farmers in a certain district in California have paid $8000 to "Rain-Maker" Hatfield, the contracted amount of rain having fallen, and Texas districts are reported as bidding for his services.

And yet, every rain which visited this district was traced by the weather bureau to at least a thousand miles, from its origin in the Pacific Ocean to far beyond the "rain-maker's" contract district. Not a drop fell from any storm local to the scene of his labors. Either he was calling cyclones from the distant deep, or he called nothing.

Since scarcely anybody believes in rain-makers, this demonstration of their ill-gotten money may not be important, but it does illustrate the mental process of most of our popular illusions.

Grandmother put goose grease on three sore throats that got well. Therefore, these three cures are more conclusive, to her and her descendants, than all the hundreds of millions of sore throats in the collected experience of the medical profession. Uncle Henry lost his money in a bank that broke. Therefore, you are "afraid of banks." The whole trouble is simply lack of imagination. Those Tulare Lake ranchers could see the rain that fell in their own district. They could not picture it in its whole progress from the North Pacific to Mexico.

H. U. Bardwell continues to write "insurance—auto or fire—makes no difference to Hal."

California is the only state in the union which has elected two women to Congress.

BRINGS YOUTH TO OLD FOLKS

One of Tanlac's greatest blessings is the new life and vigor it brings to old folks. Men and women up in the seventies and eighties are writing to us every day to thank us for Tanlac's wondrous benefits.

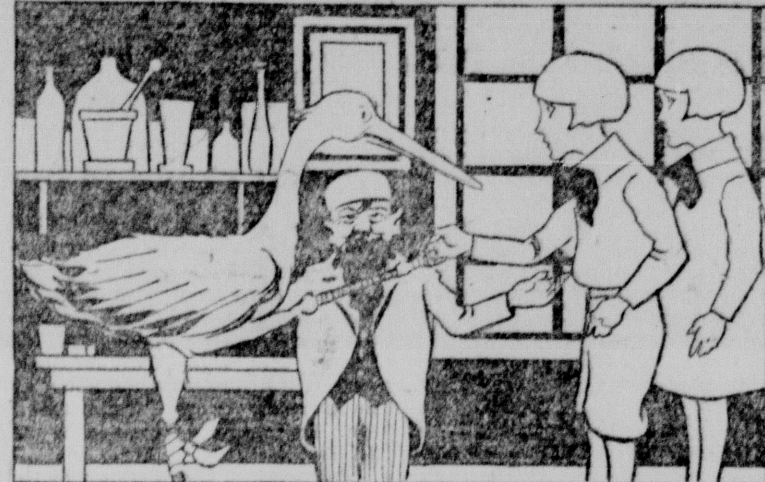

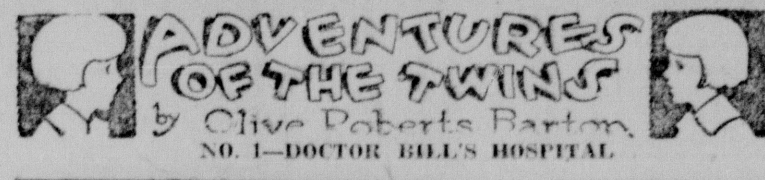

Tanlac is a natural tonic. It drives poisons from the blood, stirs up the lazy liver and puts digestive organs in working order.

Made after the famous Tanlac formula from roots, barks and rare herbs, it is nature's own tonic and builder—harmless to man or child.

If your body is weakened and run-down, if you lack ambition, can't eat or sleep, you'll be delighted with Tanlac's quick results.

Mister Stork, this is Nancy and Nick.

"I have a friend," said the Fairy Queen to Nancy and Nick, the Twins. "Who would like very much to have you visit him?"

"Who is it?" asked Nick eagerly. "The fairy bird doctor," answered the Fairy Queen. "He's called Doctor Bill."

"That's a funny name," laughed Nancy. "Where does he live?"

"Far, far away on an island at sea," said the Fairy Queen. "No one ever saw a sick bird, did he? Well, the reason is that when a bird gets sick he flies away at once to Doctor Bill's hospital and stays there until he gets well. If the bird cannot fly, like the ostrich, for instance, he goes as far as he can and Doctor Bill sends his ferry-boat and takes him the rest of the way."

"How soon may I go?" asked Nick quickly.

"Right away, if you wish," answered the Fairy Queen. "The magic shoes will take you there and bring you back any time you like."

"Hooryay!" cried both of the Twins. "Good-bye, then. We guess we'll be going."

"Good-bye," said Nancy.

"Good-bye," said the Fairy Queen. "I hope that you will have a very nice time, and learn a lot."

The Twins were lifted up into the air by magic, and whisked away over the ocean until they came to an island.

In less than no time they found themselves before an odd-looking house set in a garden full of trees. "The trees were full of birds of all shapes and sizes—some bandaged, some lame, some singing, some scolding, and some just sitting still doing nothing at all.

On a sign over the door it said: "Doctor Bill's Bird Hospital. Free! Come One—Come All!"

"This must be the place," said Nick, lifting the knocker and letting it drop with a loud bang.

"Come in," called a jolly voice.

So the Twins lifted up the latch and walked right in as they were told.

"Why, hello there! You're not birds!" said a merry little man to whom the jolly voice belonged. "And you certainly don't look sick. Oh, now I know who you are. You're the Twins, aren't you—the ones the Fairy Queen likes so much. I thought so," he nodded when Nancy explained that that was indeed who they were, and that they had come on a visit. "Make yourselves right at home. Here's a poor fellow who has just arrived, and I'm listening to his troubles. Mister Stork, this is Nancy and Nick. Nancy and Nick, this is Mister Stork."

"How do you do," said the stork, limping over and shaking hands.

"Do you know anything about Africa? I was just about to tell Doctor Bill here how I got hurt."

"Africa?" exclaimed Nick. "I didn't know you lived there."

"Only in winter," said Mister Stork. "In the summer I live on roof in Holland. But it gets pretty cold, so I fly south across the Mediterranean Sea. But sit down and I'll tell you all about it."

"I was in poor health for a number of years with stomach and bowel trouble," said Mrs. Bella Winzenread of 1525 Lawton St., Indianapolis, Ind. "I would have nervous indigestion and suffered with gas in my stomach—was in pain nearly all the time. I had ten of the best doctors; they would help me a little at first, then I would get no better. At last, I started taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and began to improve. I took ten bottles and now I don't have that gas any more. I took Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Peppets along with the 'Discovery' and feel fine. I can't say enough for Dr. Pierce's remedies. may be sure before he creaches town that he will have seats for the theater that night.

Newspapermen shouldn't turn up their nose at press agents, if any of them do that any more. Press agents are doing quite well on Broadway, thank you. Guthrie McClintic used to send out notices for Winthrop Ames. Now he's producer of "Mrs. Partridge Presents." Kilbourne Gordon once represented Brady and Wendell Phillips Dodge was with Belasco. Both are now gaining fame and wealth as producers.

Traffic on the main arteries of the town is individual and distinctive. For instance, Seventh avenue is devoted almost entirely to taxis, while Eighth avenue has a preponderance of light trucks. And on Ninth avenue the heavy trucks hold sway. Varick street, a main thoroughfare of the lower West Side, is lined with great drays pulled by horses. These drays mostly contain shipments for steamers. They must stand in line for hours. Autos, consuming gasoline during these waits are far more expensive than horses. —JAMES W. DEAN.

DEFINING THE TELEPHONE

Just what does the word "telephone" mean?

The "telephone," according to the dictionary, is "an instrument for reproducing sound at a distant point, by the transmission of impulses over a conducting wire or cord, especially by electricity."

But, although that definition may be academically correct, the word means much more to the millions of telephone users in America.

To the merchant it means profit. Many stores and businesses conduct the bulk of their transactions over the telephone.

To the professional man it means innumerable things. Without it the doctor, for instance, would find himself so isolated from his clientele that his practice would be confined virtually to the persons living in his immediate neighborhood.

To the newspaperman the telephone signifies a means of getting a "scoop" into his news room before the opposition may be aware that the story even has "broken."

To the housewife the telephone means saving steps without number and time beyond computation.

fact, all the first years of my married life, I am putting away. I am starting on a new path which promises to one very different from the last.

Have I learned anything from the last four years? I don't know. It almost seems to me that I am just a much a creature of moods and impulses, of little jealousies and trivial prejudices as I always have been.

There is, however, one thing that I have learned, little Marquise, and learned thoroughly. Love does not change character. Character is something of slow growth. Character can be changed no more by love than it can be changed by religion.

I think, perhaps, that I am growing more tolerant, and I am almost sure that Jack is growing more thoughtful, but neither of us have reached anything near the tolerance or thoughtfulness that we have been taught to believe would come to us immediately through a great love.

I am an old married woman now with two children. I have passed out of the romance of marriage long ago. In fact, my romance was shattered early and I have found that life is very different from that of which I dreamed. I am leaving this place where the beginning of my married life was spent, seeking not thrills, not passionate love, not even a great love, but contentment.

I want to be contented with conditions. I know that one should never be contented with attainment and I am still seeking something which perhaps will come to me sometime when I am old and pastionless and cold and sensible.

Four years ago, when I married Jack, I did not have much of an idea of what lay before me. I only knew that when he was with me I felt the thrill of his presence all through my being. I wanted to be with him always. I begrudged every moment that he had to be away from me. Although I did not know it, I think I was jealous of his time. I liked to rease my eyes to his and find admiration there. I liked to nestle in his arms and find tenderness there. I liked to hear him speak, and find a caress in each word. Until one morning when I found that I was not my husband's first love I had not had room in my heart for a jealous thought. Until I woke up after the motor accident and found little Jack in my arms, I had not the slightest conception of what a woman must feel toward a helpless little human mite that has been given into her care.

Until then all my world has been in Jack's love for me. Since then I found that world one of great illusions and they faded out and then came back and faded out again until I do not know whether the illusion which is in my brain and soul is in reality or that the material things which are about me every day are only real.

No need now, to drain your crank case every 500 miles. We recommend, and you can count on at least 800 miles when you use PENNZOIL instead, of 500 miles as is the general practice when using all Southern and Western Oils.

PENNZOIL is refined from PURE PENNSYLVANIA CRUDE, the highest grade oil in the world.

PURE PENNSYLVANIA OILS commands a premium over oil from other fields because of its unexcelled lubricating qualities and high flash test. This fact is well known and understood by the Oil trade. But, on account of the abundance of other cheaper oils the public has not been generally informed on this superior quality of PURE PENNSYLVANIA OILS.

Buy your oil by Name or Brand. Remember there are a dozen or more different kinds and grades of motor oil, many very cheap and very poor. Some claim as PENNSYLVANIA OIL, compounds in which a very small per cent of PENNSYLVANIA OIL is used. Every drop of PENNZOIL is made from PURE PENNSYLVANIA crude.

When you say to your garageman, "Give me a quart of PENNZOIL," you are sure of getting 100% PURE PENNSYLVANIA OIL.

Mixing in the crank case of your automobile different kinds and grades of motor oil is just as serious to your motor's efficiency as feeding adulterated food to yourself would be to your health. Have your crank case drained today and filled with PENNZOIL, a PURE PENNSYLVANIA OIL with a paraffin base, free from carbon and gumming residue, a lubricant that won't break down under heat, and maintains a friction-free film between the moving parts of your motor.

You can tell PURE PENNSYLVANIA OIL by its gravity, which should always test 29 degrees Baume. All Western and Southern oils range from 5 to 10 degrees lower than this. Remember also that color is not a safe test for pure PENNSYLVANIA OIL. The pale ambers and deeper reds of PENNZOIL can be counterfeited by acid bleaching and filtering the asphaltum base oils, after they are refined.

PENNZOIL is refined at Oil City, Pennsylvania, the heart of the Pennsylvania Oil fields, and is distributed in this territory by the Chapman's Inde-Penn Oil & Refining Co.

CHAPMAN'S INDE PENN GAS

for fuel and PENNZOIL for lubrication is the ideal combination that will make your motor work better and wear longer.

OTTO MOLLN OF MAYTOWN DIED THURSDAY P. M.

Flu-Pneumonia Fatal After Illness of One Month

Maytown—Otto Molln passed away Thursday afternoon after a month's illness with pneumonia. Mr. Molln is survived by his wife, father and mother and two brothers, and a host of friends who regret his passing.

Mrs. Julius Pfeffer suffered a paralytic stroke on Monday and her condition is considered serious, on account of her advanced age but at present she is resting quite comfortably.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Falvre and family spent Thursday evening in Amboy.

James Buckley and Edward McFadden were Amboy business callers Wednesday.

J. McQuide of Amboy was here Sunday visiting friends.

Ben Aubert installed a 5-tube Neutrodyne radio recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Royce Nichols have returned from their wedding trip, which was spent in the Orient.

Thomas Murphy has returned from Chicago after an extended visit with relatives.

Fred Baer of Chicago was here Sunday greeting old friends. Fred has traveled extensively since leaving here two years ago, but says he thinks there is no place like the old home town.

A May hop will be given in St. Patrick's hall Wednesday evening May 6. Music by the Gloom-Chasers of Prophetstown.

James Kelley and Irene McBride of Amboy were calling on friends here Sunday.

Frank Finn and Winnifred McFadden attended the theater in Dixon Sunday evening.

Michael Dalen of Amboy was here Sunday calling on friends.

John Friel is erecting a barn on his farm. Joe Cleinmark of Amboy is doing the work.

John Meurer was an Amboy business caller Saturday.

Daniel McBride is on the sick list. The hall and wind storm of last Friday did considerable damage to buildings in this section.

Frank Burke, the genial insurance man from Ohio, is busy here adjusting losses caused by Friday's storm.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

Washington—Chief Justice Taft of the federal supreme bench visited London some time ago to study the English courts, especially their handling of criminal cases. He was much pleased. What particularly struck him was that English judges simply won't permit delay or be bothered by technicalities. If a man obviously is guilty of something, the judge concentrates on finding him so and generally succeeds. Then the authorities execute sentence and that ends it. It's the method we ought to adopt here, Justice Taft said.

All this is recalled by the recent hanging in England of Norman

"Good Citizenship Begins At Home" Says Hoover In Better Homes Plea As Demonstration Week Approaches

As is the home, so are the community and the nation. To give every American family the opportunity to make the most of its home in every way, Better Homes in America was formed and now is working throughout the nation.

Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, who is president of Better Homes in America, is convinced that the home is of the most vital importance to the future of America. He says: "The next generation will be called on to show public spirited citizenship to an increasing degree if it is to find a solution to the problems that await it. Will it move toward clean government, healthy development of our economic and social system, and fair dealing and good will between nations? Or will it drift towards corruption in government, bitter class conflicts, and the international hatreds and jealousies that culminate in war? * * * If good citizenship in the broadest sense of the term is to be the deciding factor, and I believe that it will be, we must make it as vital a matter as earning our daily bread."

"Good citizenship begins at home within the family circle, for the family is the most basic and important social unit."

The founder of the movement, Mrs. William Brown Meloney, warmly seconds Mr. Hoover's beliefs.

"This is a new day in America," says Mrs. Meloney. "A day of better homes. In every state and every county of this country there are thousands of women hard at work for Better Homes in America."

"There are 15,000,000 homes in America—the largest single industry in the world—and it is worth the thought of the best minds in the land to increase its efficiency, its satisfaction, and therefore its sacred product."

Mrs. A. H. Reeve, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and a member of the Advisory Council of Better Homes in America, is one of the hardest workers toward the extension of the "better homes" movement so that every American family may receive the benefits of this purely educational and vitally important work. The 12,000 local Parent-Teachers' Associations throughout the United States are co-operating whole-heartedly with the movement, which culminates this year in Better Homes Week—May 11th to 17th inclusive.

Thorne, convicted of killing his sweetheart, Elsie Cameron. The evidence was so purely circumstantial that even the prosecution admitted it was impossible to prove guilt beyond a shadow of doubt. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle led a strong effort to save the condemned man, on the ground that he was being railroaded. He was hanged nevertheless.

"Good work" is the comment heard in Washington judicial circles. In fact, the impression is so favorable that a meeting of legal lights is being planned here for the coming summer to consider changes in the federal law which will make convictions easier to get. The movement's backers have the English model in mind. If they can get it through Congress they hope state legislatures will see how well it works and begin imitating it.

Now, on the strength of several years of my own observation of "English justice," as a correspondent in London, I want to say that it doesn't seem to me to be all its cracked up to be. It works fast and smoothly, but at the expense of a lot of snap judgments I wouldn't like if I were on trial on a criminal charge. And, in this day and generation, anybody is liable to be.

A notable case, in my time in London, was that of Ruffie Morrison. There had been several murders in the White Chapel district and no arrests. The police were beginning to be criticized. Then there was another murder. Somebody simply had to be caught. The police brought in Morrison. He had a prison record. On that ground, the judge set him down as guilty. But right in the middle of the trial one of the constables—it was all police evidence—broke down and confessed the whole thing was a frameup. When he broke down, more broke down. The case collapsed. The prosecution threw up its hands. Well, the jury convicted Morrison. The judge sentenced him to death. Even for England, that was too much. There was a howl. Very reluctantly the government commuted the sentence to life imprisonment. Morrison's doing time yet, I suppose, for a crime there absolutely is no reason to think he had a thing to do with.

The English get convictions, yes—because they're not too particular whom they convict. It may be true, in this country, that a man actually guilty of some crime finds escape too easy for the public's good. But in England, once accused of a capital offense, he'd better make his peace with his Maker, whether guilty or not. Personally I prefer the American system. I may be charged with something some time myself.

London—"Men can no longer afford to maintain women in idleness, and for women to go out and earn their living is not only a necessity but a healthy thing," said Mrs. Phillip Snowden, wife of the labor leader, in a speech at Chelsea recently.

Fire recently destroyed part of the Louvain University chemical laboratory. The university was wrecked by the Germans during the war. Crocodiles, like ostriches, swallow pebbles and small stones for the purpose of grinding the food in their stomachs.

IF YOU ARE PLANNING TO BUILD—READ THESE ADS—AND SAVE MONEY

One can judge pretty well from the exterior appearance that the exterior is cozy. The exterior is handled in Spanish-mission style with stucco walls and tile roof. The terrace at the front with the projecting roof and baskets, forms an attractive entrance that is in keeping with the balance of the design.

The home contains four rooms beside dining-alcove and bath. Good closet space is provided for each bed-room with a linen case and a broom-closet for the hall. A chest of drawers also is provided for one bedroom.

The good-size living room has plenty of wall space for furniture, and has a fireplace at the front, adjoining the entrance. The sink and the kitchen cupboards are conveniently arranged on the outer wall, with just the right distance between the range and the work-table. The plan provides for a full basement, with laundry, fuel room, storage, etc.

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burton © 1925 NEA SERVICE INC.

"What do you think marriage is for, anyhow?" Dick asked.

THE STORY SO FAR:
GLORIA GORDON, beautiful flapper, married DICK GREGORY, a struggling young lawyer. Gloria's idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes... but no work or children!
She has hysterics when Dick tells her she must do her own housework. He borrows MAGGIE, his mother's maid, to teach Gloria to cook. She refuses to learn.
Gloria gives a housewarming. One of the guests is STANLEY WAYBURN, an actor with whom she once was in love. Dick is instantly jealous of Wayburn, although the actor confines his attentions to MYRA GAIL.
The wild party breaks up when LOILA HOUGH scolds BILL, her husband, for "petting" with MAY SEYMOUR, wife of DR. JOHN SEYMOUR. Maggie, disgusted, quits her job.
Gloria then hires RANGHILD SWANSON, although Dick tells her that they cannot afford a maid. Gloria buys several hundred dollars' worth of new clothes and insists upon a new automobile. Gloria and Wayburn go riding in it, and are seen by Dick's mother, MRS. GREGORY, who begs Gloria to mend her ways.
Next afternoon, Gloria asks Wayburn, May Seymour and JIM CAREWE, to the house. Jim brings liquor, and a jolly party is in progress when Dick returns. He puts the guests out of the house. Gloria spends the night in the guest-room.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

THE next morning Dick insisted upon getting up at his usual time. He announced, further more, that he was going to the office. "If I give in and stay at home I'll be getting the 'sick habit' first thing I know," he told Mother Gregory when she arrived at seven bringing an electric pad and a glass of grape jelly for the invalid. "I'll work this shaky feeling off in two or three hours down at the office."

"That poor boy is going to kill himself!" Mother Gregory later told RANGHILD, to whom she had taken an instant liking. She was making milk toast with her own hands for Dick while he dressed.

Gloria, reading the morning paper in the dining room, listened to the conversation going on in the kitchen. "That's the way he's been all his life... all ambition, with nobody to back it up!" Mrs. Gregory was saying to RANGHILD. "I hope you never try his food or put much grease in it. Grease gives him indigestion quicker than scald!"

"Yes, ma'am, I know," RANGHILD answered in her pleasant voice. "But Mr. Gregory doesn't look sickly to me. He's that kind of person."

"If you know what I mean, they can stand anything!"

The pantry door swung open and RANGHILD came into the dining room with the water pitcher. Gloria looked up at her.

"Don't pay any attention to Mr. Gregory's mother, RANGHILD," she said in an undertone. "You're working for me, not for her. And she's just telling you all that stuff to hear herself talk, anyway."

A few minutes later Dick came downstairs. Mother Gregory brought him his milk toast with the prideful look of a Louis Sherry displaying a wedding cake for the Astor family.

Gloria could feel Dick's eyes on her. She did not look up, but tapped her egg and buttered her toast with pretended absorption.

"Gloria," he said at last. She raised her eyes. Dick was white and haggard.

"You're crazy to try to go to the office today," she said. "Who don't you stay home and rest. Dr. John will have a fit when he finds out you've gone to work."

"Never you mind about me, Gloria. It's you I'm thinking about, just now," Dick answered in a low tone. "I've been lying awake most of the night thinking about you, to tell the truth..."

Look here, Gloria, did you love me or not when you married me?"

Do it today. Tomorrow might be too late. Insure that automobile. Had will take care of it for you. He is the job at the Dixon Loan and Building Ass'n. from 8 to 6. Drop in anytime.

See me for Fire Insurance. See me today. H. U. Bardwell, Dixon, Ill. 11

"Oh, dear, do we have to go into all that right now? Can't we have one meal in peace?" Gloria's voice was pathetic. "First of all we row about money and mauls... and now you want to raise the roof again. I suppose about yesterday afternoon. Let's forget it."

"I wish I could," Dick answered. "But it's a pretty serious thing for a fellow to come home and find his wife entertaining another man... especially a duck like Wayburn!"

He came over and put his arms around Gloria.

"Honey, I know there was nothing wrong about your little party, yesterday. You were bored and you wanted a little thrill, a taste of excitement. But other people won't say that way. They'll soon be saying that my wife's been all his life... all ambition, with nobody to back it up!"

"What's everybody down on May for?" Gloria asked. "I don't blame her a little bit for going around with Jim Carewe, if her own husband won't take her anywhere!"

Why doesn't he get next to himself, and see that he's losing May?"

Dick pondered.

He was looking out of the dining room window that faced the street, watching the Donberg twins who lived next door. They were running races with their new aerodrome. Their study legs twinkling past each other like the parts of a perfectly geared machine.

"Gosh, Gloria, wouldn't it be nice if we had a couple of little kids like those two?" he asked, tightening his hold of her. "A couple of lolly little youngsters, who'd race down the street every night to meet me..."

"Yes, and would scratch up all the furniture, and turn the house into a boiler factory when it came to noise. No thank you, sweetie! I'm afraid I'll have to squelch your fond hopes..."

She wriggled out of Dick's arms and got to her feet.

Dick, with his hands gripped stood looking down at her.

"Honey," he said, "you're just cheating yourself when you make up your mind not to have children. Why don't you want them? ... What do you think marriage is for, anyway?"

Gloria laughed stridently.

"How do I know what marriage is for? I didn't invent it!" she cried.

SEEK by the paper that Myra Gail is going to Europe again!" Mother Gregory called to her from the sunroom. "My goodness, she must coat that husband of hers a fortune in steamship tickets alone!"

Gloria stretched herself lazily on the chaise longue in the sunroom.

"Well, what's the difference so long as he can afford it?" she asked. "It's a relief to hear of a generous husband once in a while. Most of them are terrible tightwads."

Mother Gregory looked up sharply.

"That's a queer thing for you to say," she said sharply. "I'm sure Dick's generous with you... generous to a fault. As far as I can see he refuses you nothing you ask for!"

Gloria smiled, exasperatingly.

CHAPTER I

There Are Heroisms All Round Us

Mr. Huntington, her father, really was the most tactless person upon earth—a fluff, feathery, untidy cockatoo of a man, perfectly good-natured, but absolutely centered upon his own silly self. If anything could have driven me from Gladys, it would have been the thought of such a father-in-law. I am convinced that he really believed in his heart that I came round to The Chestnuts three days a week for the pleasure of his company, and very especially to hear his views upon binetism, a subject upon which he was by way of being an authority.

For an hour or more that evening I listened to his monotonous chirrup about bad money driving out good, the token value of silver, the depreciation of the rupee, and the true standards of exchange.

"Suppose," he cried with feeble violence, "that all the debts in the world were called up simultaneously, and immediate payment insisted upon—what under our present conditions would happen then?"

I gave the self-evident answer that I should be a ruined man, upon which he jumped from his chair, reproved me for my habitual levity, which made it impossible for him to discuss any reasonable subject in my presence, and bounced off out of the room to dress for a Masonic meeting.

At last I was alone with Gladys, and the moment of Fate had come! All that evening I had felt like the soldier who awaits the signal which will send him on a forlorn hope, hope of victory and fear of repulse alternating in his mind.

She sat with that proud, delicate profile of hers outlined against the red curtain. How beautiful she was! And yet how aloof! We had been friends, quite good friends; but never could I get beyond the same comradeship which I might have established with one of my fellow reporters upon the Gazette—perfectly frank, perfectly kindly, and perfectly unsexual. My instincts are all against a woman being too frank and at her ease with me. It is no compliment to a man. Where the real sex feeling begins, timidity and distrust are its companions, heritage from old wicked days when love and violence went often hand in hand.

The head bent, the averted eye, the faltering voice, the wincing figure—these, and not the unshrinking gaze and frank reply, are the true signals of passion. Even in my short life I had learned as much as that—or had inherited it in that race memory which we call instinct.

Gladys was full of every womanly quality. Some judged her to be cold and hard; but such a thought was treason. That delicately bronzed skin, almost oriental in its coloring, that raven hair, the large liquid eyes, the full but exquisite lips—all the stigmata of passion were there. But I was sadly conscious that up to now I had never found the secret of drawing it forth. However, come what might, I should have done with suspense and bring matters to a head to-night. She could but refuse me, and better be a repulsed lover than an accepted brother.

So far my thoughts had carried me, and I was about to break the long and uneasy silence, when two critical dark eyes looked round at me, and the proud head was shaken in smiling reproof. "I have a presentiment that you are going to propose, Ned. I do wish you wouldn't; for things are so much nicer as they are."

I drew my chair a little nearer. "Now, how did you know that I was going to propose?" I asked in genuine wonder.

"Don't women always know? Do you suppose any woman in the world was ever taken unaware? But—oh, Ned, our friendship has been so good and so pleasant! What a pity to spoil it! Don't you feel how splendid it is that a young man and a young woman should be able to talk face to face as we have talked?"

"I don't know, Gladys. You see, I can talk face to face with—the station-master." I can't imagine how that official came into the matter; but in he trotted, and set us both laughing. "That does not satisfy me in the least. I want my arms round you, and your head on my breast, and—oh, Gladys, I want—"

She had sprung from her chair, as she saw signs that I proposed to demonstrate some of my wants. "You've spoiled everything, Ned," she said. "It's all so beautiful and natural until this kind of thing comes in! It is such a pity! Why can't you control yourself?"

"I didn't invent it," I pleaded. "It's nature. It's love."

"Well, perhaps if both love, it may be different. I have never felt it."

"But you must—you, with your beauty, with your soul! Oh, Gladys, you were made for love! You must love!"

"One must wait till it comes." "But why can't you love me, Gladys? Is it my appearance, or what?"

She did unbind a little. She put forward a hand—such a gracious, stooping attitude it was—and she pressed back my head. Then she looked into my upturned face with a very wistful smile.

"No, it isn't that," she said at last. "You're not a conceited boy by nature, and so I can safely tell you it is not that. It's deeper."

"My character?"

She nodded severely. "What can I do to mend it? Do sit down and talk it over. No, really, I won't if you'll only sit down!"

She looked at me with a wondering distrust which was much more to my mind than her whole-hearted confidence. How primitive and bestial it looks when you put it down in black and white!—and perhaps after all it is only a feeling peculiar to myself. Anyhow, she sat down.

I gave the self-evident answer that I should be a ruined man, upon which he jumped from his chair, reproved me for my habitual levity, which made it impossible for him to discuss any reasonable subject in my presence, and bounced off out of the room to dress for a Masonic meeting.

At last I was alone with Gladys, and the moment of Fate had come! All that evening I had felt like the soldier who awaits the signal which will send him on a forlorn hope, hope of victory and fear of repulse alternating in his mind.

"Well, perhaps if both love, it may be different. I have never felt it."

"But you must—you, with your loved, and now other women must have envied her! That's what I should like to be—envied for my man."

"I'd have done it to please you." "But you shouldn't do it merely to please me. You should do it because you can't help yourself, because it's natural to you, because the man in you is crying out for heroic expression. Now, when you described the Wigan coal explosion last month, could you not have gone down and helped those people, in spite of the choke-damp?"

"I did." "You never said so." "There was nothing worth bucking about."

"I didn't know." She looked at me with rather more interest. "That was brave of you."

"I had to. If you want to write good copy, you must be where the things are."

"What a praiseworthy motive! It seems to take all the romance out of it. But, still, whatever your motive, I am glad that you went down that mine." She gave me her hand; but with such sweetness

"I want my arms around you, and your head on my breast, and—oh, Gladys, I want—"

"Now tell me what's amiss with me?"

"I'm in love with somebody else," said she. It was my turn to jump out of my chair.

"It's nobody in particular," she explained, laughing at the expression of my face. "Only an ideal. I've never met the kind of man I mean."

"Tell me about him. What does he look like?"

"Oh, he might look very much like you."

"How dear of you to say that! Well, what is it that he does that I don't do? Just say the word—teetotal, vegetarian, aeronaut, theosophist, superman. I'll have a try at it, Gladys, if you will only give me an idea what would please you."

She laughed at the elasticity of my character. "Well, in the first place, I don't think my ideal would speak like that," said she. "He would be a harder, sterner man, not so ready to adapt himself to a silly girl's whim. But, above all, he must be a man who could do, who could act, who could lead. Death in the face and have no fear of him, a man of great deeds and strange experiences. It is never a man that I should love, but always the glories he had won; for they would be reflected upon me. Think of Richard Burton! When I read his wife's life of him I could so understand her love! And Lady Stanley! Did you ever read the wonderful last chapter of that book about her husband? These are the sort of men that a woman could worship with all her soul, and yet be the greater, not the less, on account of her love, honored by all the world as the inspirer of noble deeds."

She looked so beautiful in her enthusiasm that I nearly brought down the whole level of the interview. I gripped myself hard, and went on with the argument.

"We can't all be Stanleys and Burtons," said I; "besides, we don't get the chance—at least, I never had the chance. If I did, I should try to take it."

"But chances are all around you. It is the mark of the kind of man I mean that he makes his own chances. You can't hold him back. I've never met him, and yet I seem to know him so well. There are heroisms all round us waiting to be done. It's for men to do them, and for women to reserve their love as a reward for such men. Look at that young French man who went up last week in a balloon. It was blowing a gale of wind; but because he was announced to go he insisted on starting. The wind blew him fifteen hundred miles in twenty-four hours, and he fell in the middle of Russia. That was the kind of man I mean. Think of the woman as and dignity that I could only stoop and kiss it. "I dare say I am merely a foolish woman with a young girl's fancies. And yet it is so real with me, so entirely part of my very self, that I cannot help acting upon it. If I marry, I do want to marry a famous man!"

"Why should you not?" I cried. "It is women like you who brace men up. Give me a chance, and see if I will take it! Besides, as you say, men ought to make their own chances, and not wait until they are given. Look at Clive—just a clerk, and he conquered India. By George! I'll do something in the world yet!"

She laughed at my sudden Irish effervescence. "Why not?" she said. "You have everything a man could have—youth, health, strength, education, energy. I am sorry you spoke. And now I am glad—so glad—if it wakes these thoughts in you!"

"And if I do—"

Her dear hand rested like warm velvet upon my lips. "Not another word, Sir! You should have been at the office for evening duty half an hour ago; only I hadn't the heart to remind you. Some day, perhaps, when you have won your place in the world, we shall talk it over again."

And so it was that I found myself that foggy November evening pursuing the Camberwell train with my heart glowing within me, and with the eager determination that not another day should elapse before I should find some deed which was worthy of my lady. But who—who in all this wide world could ever have imagined the incredible shape which that deed was to take, or the strange steps by which I was led to the doing of it?

And, after all, this opening chapter will seem to the reader to have nothing to do with my narrative; and yet there would have been no narrative without it, for it is only when a man goes out into the world with the thought that there are heroisms all round him, and with the desire all alive in his heart to follow any which may come within sight of him, that he breaks away as I did from the life he knows, and ventures forth into the wonderful mystic twilight land where lie the great adventures and the great rewards. Behold me, then, at the office of the Daily Gazette, on the staff of which I was a most insignificant unit, with the settled determination that that very night, if possible, to find the quest which should be worthy of my Gladys! Was it hardness, was it selfishness, that she should ask me to risk my life for her own glorification? Such thoughts may come to middle age; but never to ardent three-and-twenty in the fever of his first love.

Miss Rogers Gained 15 Pounds in Six Weeks

Skinny Men and Women Gain 5 Pounds in 30 Days or Money Back.

My dear friends: After my attack of Flu I was thin, rundown and weak. I had a sallow complexion, my cheeks were sunk in and I was continually troubled with gas on my stomach. I felt stuffy and had lost my appetite. I had read about McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets and decided to give them a trial. At once, I began to pick up an appetite, my cheeks filled out and my complexion became healthy looking and I gained 15 pounds in six weeks and am very thankful for what McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets did for me.

Miss Alberta Rogers, 264 W. Cerro Gorda St., Decatur, Ill.

To take on weight, grow strong and vigorous, to fill out the hollows in cheeks and neck, try McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets for 30 days. 60 Tablets—60 cents at Rowland's Pharmacy, Dixon and Rochelle, and live druggists everywhere. If they don't give you wonderful help in 30 days, get your money back—you be the judge. But be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine.

The Home Follows the Automobile, Which Follows Oil

The petroleum industry is a vital factor in upbuilding the home.

Statistics prove that the states which lead in the number of motor cars per 1000 population have the highest percentage of homes owned. Since 1915, home building has followed in direct ratio, the increase in motor car production.

The home follows the automobile, and the automobile followed the wide distribution of gasoline and oils at prices which all can afford to pay.

The low price of gasoline and oil which makes the universal use of the automobile possible is due solely to the intensive scientific work of the petroleum industry.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) by the application of modern refinery processes has taken a leading part in creating enormous additional percentages of gasoline from crude. In addition, it has put into operation the first modern, and the most complete system for distribution of oil products.

A few years ago the horse and buggy was the mark of affluence. Only the well-to-do felt able to enjoy such luxury. Today, hundreds of thousands of people go to and from their work in a motor car. Motor vehicles carry 289,000 children to school, every day of the school year.

Home owning is nation building. Crowded industrial cities once threatened to reduce all American families to the ranks of apartment dwellers. The production of an abundance of high-grade, refined petroleum was the scientific achievement which, by making automotive transportation at low cost possible, gave every worker the opportunity to put 20 miles or more between home and job, and enabled him to bring up his children where the air is fresh and the grass is green.

Standard Oil Company (Indiana) service puts oil at the disposal of every motorist in the Middle West. In perfecting this service, this Company has contributed to the upbuilding of thousands upon thousands of happy American homes.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is proud of its part in such constructive work. It is by such achievements that this company attains enduring success.
